“I had such a nice dream,”
said Toby Curlicue.

“It was the opening night
of our family’s new Pass-the-Pasta Restaurant!”

“It is opening night!” replied
his sister, Olive. “Let’s get up and get going!”

“We have lots of work
to do before we open,”
said Olive and Toby’s mother, Maria.

“But we can do it if
we work together—
a perfect team,”
said their father, Roberto.

The Curlicue pig family
made a list of all the tasks
they had to do and
divided them up.

“Let’s all be back by three o’clock,” suggested Roberto.
“That way, we’ll have plenty of time to finish setting up.”

Toby and Olive hurried
to the Hoppin' Farmers Market and filled bag
after bag with fresh
salad ingredients.

They had to make
several trips to carry
all the bags to
their restaurant.

Meanwhile, Roberto
and Maria were buying
scrumptious pastries and desserts at the Tickle-Your-Taste-Buds Bakery.

It took several trips to carry all the boxes to
their restaurant.

That afternoon, Toby and Olive scurried to the Busy Beaver Launderette.

“The tablecloths and napkins
for your new restaurant
are fresh and clean,”
said Tapper Waterwaggle.

“Thanks!” said the Curlicue children.
“They’re just right!”

It took Toby and Olive several trips to carry all
the clean tablecloths and napkins to their restaurant.

Meanwhile, the Curlicue parents were at Li'l Blossoms Flower Shop, choosing beautiful flowers to decorate the tabletops.

It took them several trips to carry their armloads of bouquets to the restaurant.

By the end of the afternoon,
all the Curlicues were back at Pass-the-Pasta Restaurant.

“After we make the salads,
arrange the desserts,
and prepare the tables,
we’ll be ready!”
Maria exclaimed.

Before long, they were done, and they still had one whole hour before the opening.

“We’ve all worked together—a perfect team,” said Roberto, smiling.

Then suddenly,
all the Curlicues gasped.

“We forgot the most important task of all!”
cried Toby. “Making pizza
dough, pasta, and sauce
for tonight!”

“Oh, no!” worried Maria.

“We’ll never be ready
to open our restaurant
on time!”

But Olive had no intention of giving up. “We can do it if we all work together!”
she said.

Toby, Olive, Maria,
and Roberto sprang
into action.

Soon knives were
chopping, pans were
clanging, spoons were
swirling, and flour
was flying!

In a flash, the pasta
was made, the sauce
was simmering,
and the pizza oven
was warm.

The clock chimed.
“Six o’clock—we did it!”
cried Olive.

Toby flung open
the doors, and all their
hungry woodland friends,
who were lined up
outside, cheered!

They couldn't wait to enjoy their first meals at
Pass-the-Pasta Restaurant.

Later, all the diners thanked the Curlicues for their delicious dinners.

“We all worked together,”
said Roberto, and then Maria, Toby, and Olive chimed in—
“A perfect team!”
