“This one goes here,
beside the other kid-size
toothbrushes,” said Kip Kingsberry. “Right?”

“Right. And this
one goes here!” said Kip’s
older sister, Kya.

Their parents, Roy and Katt,
are dentists who give out
colorful toothbrushes to their patients.

Kip and Kya organize the toothbrushes in their special drawer—but they wish they could do more to help.

“Goodbye,” called Tapper and Tiny Waterwaggle to Dr. Katt
and Dr. Roy. “Thank you for keeping our teeth
so white!”

“Here you go,” said Kip and Kya, handing each of the beaver kids a new toothbrush.

Next the Riverdipper hippo family
arrived for little Heidi's
very first dental appointment.

“My gum hurts,”
said Heidi Riverdipper
in a soft voice.

But Dr. Katt said,
“Don’t worry. No tooth
is too much for us.
Open wide!”

After a quick peek, she said,
“Everything is fine!
You’re just getting a new
baby tooth.”

---

The dentists decided to check Heidi's other teeth, so her brother, Humphrey, headed to the waiting room.

“My wiggly tooth is so loose, but I'm afraid it will never come out!”
Humphrey told Kip and Kya.
“Can you help?”

---

“Sure!” said the Kingsberry kids. Finally a dental problem they could fix!

After a consultation, Kip and Kya instructed Humphrey, “Push the wiggly tooth back and forth with your tongue.”

Back and forth, back and forth, Humphrey
pushed the wiggly tooth
with his tongue.

But nope—the tooth
stubbornly refused
to come out.

---

“No problem,” said the Kingsberry kids.

After another quick
consultation, they asked Humphrey to wait—and soon
they returned with a box of sugar-free purple bubble gum.

“Have two,” said Kya,
and as Humphrey popped
the pieces in his mouth,
Kip added,
“Have two more!”

“Now, chew, chew, chew!”
urged Kya.

The Kingsberry children watched carefully as Humphrey chewed,
chewed, and chewed the
sticky mouthful.

“Well?” asked Kya.
“The wiggly tooth
is out, right?”

---

But when Humphrey blew a bubble to check, the tooth was still there.

“There’s only one thing to do,” said Kya. She tied one end of a string around Humphrey’s wiggly tooth and the other end to the doorknob.

“This will work,” Kip said, twirling his tail excitedly.

“Guaranteed,” said Kya.

“One, two, three...”
they counted, and—
Slam!

“What was that noise?”
cried Dr. Katt and Dr. Roy,
as they came rushing out
with Heidi and her mom
close behind.

“Humphrey has a wiggly
tooth that might never come out!” Kip said to his parents.

---

But Dr. Katt smiled.
“Don’t worry—all wiggly
teeth fall out when they’re ready.”

And just then,
Humphrey stuck out
his tongue—and there was the tooth!

---

“See?” said Dr. Katt.
“It was ready.”

Humphrey, Kip, and Kya
grinned at one another.
They knew that no
tooth was too much for the Kingsberry kids!

Walk-In Health Clinic™

Kip and Kya Kingsberry like to help out at their parents' dental clinic in Honeysuckle Hollow. They wish they could do more than just organize the toothbrushes.

Dr. Roy and Dr. Katt's motto is: "Everyone is welcome. No tooth is too much for us!" And they're usually right!

But when the dentists become busy with little Heidi Riverdipper, who arrives for her very first dental appointment, Heidi's brother, Humphrey, asks Kip and Kya for help with a wiggly tooth. Is this their chance to shine?
